

FULL BODY HARNESS

The most effective way to prevent injury or death in the event of a fall is to wear a full body harness as part of a total fall protection system. Harnesses are engineered to disperse impact forces evenly among shoulders, torso, buttocks, and legs.

When using full body harnesses, be aware of these guidelines: Only the back dee ring may be used for fall protection. Side, front and chest dee rings should be used for positioning only. Shoulder dee rings should be used for retrieval only. All straps must be secure before utilizing the harness. Never attach more than one snap to a dee ring. Please review safe use and inspection information on Pages 141-143.

DH30 SERIES

The DH30 series is a strong, rugged, comfortable, yet lightweight full body harness developed for use in the industrial and construction environments. The DH30 combines four separate functions into one full body harness: A removable tool belt, a great looking, comfortable, adjustable 6" body/back pad, a shoulder strap system that will relieve the weight of the tool belt from the user's waist/back, a full body harness for the ultimate in fall protection, sub pelvic strap, and grommeted buckle leg straps.
